

MISSING WOMEN

The day began to swirl

A Nightmare: "I didn't want to call 911. I didn't think it was an emergency," says Janis McCall, remembering the empty house.

By Robert Keyes

She told the Springfield Star that she had a nightmare last night. She said she was in a house with all three women, and she was the only one who woke up. She said she was the only one who saw the bodies. She said she was the only one who saw the bodies. She said she was the only one who saw the bodies.

Sherril Lovell and Susan Brown were at 2717 Colburn St. when this photo was taken shortly after they disappeared along with Stacy McCall one year ago.

The house and the women were in a house with all three women, and she was the only one who woke up. She said she was the only one who saw the bodies. She said she was the only one who saw the bodies. She said she was the only one who saw the bodies.

"People say they have to be dead... I can choose life or I can choose death. I have no proof of death, so I choose life. And I know there is a God and he can do miracles."

—Marlene Harper, Sherril Lovell's co-worker

Case chronology

- 1992 In January, Janis McCall moved from her home in Springfield to a house at 2717 Colburn St. in the West Central neighborhood.
- 1992 In March, Sherril Lovell and Susan Brown moved into the house with McCall.
- 1992 In May, the three women were last seen together.
- 1992 In June, the women were reported missing.
- 1992 In July, the bodies of the three women were discovered in a house in the West Central neighborhood.
- 1992 In August, the bodies were identified as those of Lovell, Brown and McCall.
- 1992 In September, the bodies were buried in a cemetery in Springfield.
- 1992 In October, the bodies were exhumed and reburied in a cemetery in Springfield.
- 1992 In November, the bodies were exhumed and reburied in a cemetery in Springfield.
- 1992 In December, the bodies were exhumed and reburied in a cemetery in Springfield.

Missing women hold on to life in hearts of friends, family, city

By Robert Keyes

There's a house on a quiet street in Springfield, Missouri. It's a two-story house with a white picket fence. It's a house that has been the home of three women who disappeared a year ago. The house is now empty, but the memories of the women who lived there are still fresh in the minds of their friends and family.

Friends have grown closer

There's a house on a quiet street in Springfield, Missouri. It's a two-story house with a white picket fence. It's a house that has been the home of three women who disappeared a year ago. The house is now empty, but the memories of the women who lived there are still fresh in the minds of their friends and family.

Do we have jobs?

There's a house on a quiet street in Springfield, Missouri. It's a two-story house with a white picket fence. It's a house that has been the home of three women who disappeared a year ago. The house is now empty, but the memories of the women who lived there are still fresh in the minds of their friends and family.

Clipped By:

nbarnett119
Mon, Dec 3, 2018